Husch Blackwell Welcomes Benjamin Brothers as Senior Counsel to Energy and Natural Resources Industry Group

National law firm Husch Blackwell is pleased to announce that Benjamin Brothers has joined the firm as senior counsel, further strengthening its nationally recognized Energy and Natural Resources industry group. Brothers joins from the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), the largest government-owned electricity provider in the United States, where he developed deep experience in utility capacity planning, large-scale power procurement, generation interconnection, and transmission infrastructure.

Based in Knoxville, Tennessee as a member of The Link, Brothers brings a distinguished track record of designing utility scale power procurement solicitations or request for proposals (RFP), originating and negotiating large-scale Power Purchase Agreements (PPAs), and navigating commercial energy agreements within complex transmission interconnection procedures and processes. His arrival deepens the firm's Energy Project Contracts and Transaction teams while meaningfully expanding Husch Blackwell's geographic reach into the South — a strategically important region for the energy industry.

“Benjamin is well known throughout the energy sector in the Southeast, particularly among clients and counterparties who engage with the TVA,” said Anna Kimbrell, partner and leader of Husch Blackwell's Energy & Natural Resources industry team. “His hands-on experience at one of the country's premier public utilities gives him a nuanced understanding of how utilities, developers, and regulators approach large-scale energy transactions.”

“Husch Blackwell has built something genuinely distinctive in the energy space: a team that combines deep legal skill with real-world industry knowledge,” Brothers said. “I have spent my career working on the deals that keep the lights on and the grid advancing in its capabilities, and I am excited to bring that experience to clients who are navigating some of the most complex transactions in the energy market today. The firm’s presence and momentum in the South, combined with its national platform, make it the ideal place to continue doing meaningful work in this space.”
