Diversity on Public Company Boards of Directors

Diversity on corporate boards has been a topic of increasing focus in recent years. We have seen companies, investors (including institutional investors), investment banks, proxy advisory firms, corporate governance organizations and experts, asset managers, and legislators call for increased diversity on corporate boards.

Husch Blackwell's white paper illustrates the growing interest in board diversity, breaks it down by state law and legislation, shares responses to board diversity from the investment community, and offers best practices for locating, selecting, recruiting and retaining diverse directors.
