OVERVIEW

Because Mike developed strong relationships working in the public sector, government decision-makers have confidence that he will deliver the legal services they need.

A former elected county attorney for Harris County, Texas, Mike has firsthand experience with how government works. He draws on those public-sector insights and the relationships he built during his 25-year public law practice in his current work with clients. When governmental entities or elected officials need legal services, they rely on Mike as a Houston public law attorney to help them resolve their issues.

Mike works with governmental entities on condemnations, regulatory compliance issues, civil rights lawsuits, permitting disputes, situations that arise in appraising tax values for tax purposes and various administrative matters. He also advises public officials and candidates for elected office on ballot challenges, election litigation and difficult statutory disputes.
