OVERVIEW

Sarah's commercial litigation practice is focused on developing strategies to solve clients' problems.

Sarah represents clients facing contract disputes, business torts and consumer fraud actions, including those involving statutes such as the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (TCPA). She assists small and large clients nationwide such as banks, pharmacy benefits managers and air ambulance carriers across several sectors including healthcare and financial services.

Sarah takes the time to understand how each client's business operates and then makes strategically effective and individualized recommendations. She oversees the day-to-day management of numerous complex cases, developing defense strategies, coordinating offensive and defensive discovery, and preparing dispositive motions in arbitrations and in state and federal courts across the United States.

Passionate about pro bono work, Sarah was part of a team that represented prisoners sentenced to life without parole as juveniles, and assisted in the filing for a writ of certiorari before the U.S. Supreme Court. Sarah's experience also includes representing victims through Husch Blackwell's Human Trafficking Clinic, and she prepares applications for asylum seekers.
