OVERVIEW

Emily drives consistency and minimizes chaos for clients pursuing or defending contract claims.

Emily represents and advises businesses in pursuit or defense of contractual claims. She provides legal guidance and project management through the often-chaotic prospect and realities of litigation—including pre-litigation analysis and negotiation; all aspects of discovery, motion practice, trial, and appeal; as well as other alternative dispute resolution opportunities. Whether conducting investigations, negotiating the end of a contractual relationship, or managing lawsuits in state and federal courts, Emily brings an unparalleled ability to drive consistency that clients value. Her creative problem-solving abilities allow her to craft innovative legal strategies tailored to each client's unique goals and circumstances.

A master at imposing order, Emily initiates and executes detailed processes and procedures to minimize the disruption litigation often brings. She understands that legal disputes can derail a company's operations and momentum. As both a legal advisor and project manager, she collaborates with clients to implement systems for organization, communication, and keeping key initiatives advancing smoothly. Drawing from her studies in well-being at Yale, Emily works to optimize time management and workflow efficiency to mitigate strains.

Emily is passionate about safeguarding clients' long-term interests amid complex legal challenges. Her holistic approach immerses her fully in their businesses, bringing consistency, communication, and control despite the unpredictability of litigation. Emily's focused

Community Leadership

Before beginning her legal career, Emily served as a Corps Member with Teach for America, teaching fifth grade in rural Arizona, outside of Phoenix.

Emily now maintains an active pro bono practice, including creating end of life documents for first responders and other civil servants through Wisconsin's Wills for Heroes Program. She also accepts pro bono appointments in prisoner litigation, and her past significant cases have included challenging confinement conditions at Wisconsin's only juvenile prison and obtaining a favorable jury verdict for defamation damages against a Sandy Hook conspiracy theorist.

Emily also serves on the planning committee for the annual fundraiser for Milwaukee Parks Foundation (Go Green for Parks).
