OVERVIEW

Jessica focuses her practice on labor and employment law, partnering with clients to create and maintain productive workforces.

Jessica works with clients to improve employee morale, reduce turnover, and minimize the risk of litigation. While Jessica advises employers on compliance with a range of state and federal employment laws, she is particularly experienced in guiding clients through the ADA accommodation process, FMLA leave, employee discipline issues, drug testing policies, and maintaining a workplace free of discrimination and harassment.

When litigation occurs, Jessica aims to resolve disputes through mediation and arbitration when feasible but also has experience defending clients in federal and state court. Jessica has handled both individual and class action lawsuits involving allegations of:

- Race, age, gender, and disability discrimination
- Breach of restrictive covenants and confidentiality agreements
- Sexual harassment
- Violations of Title VII, ADEA, ADA, FMLA, and related state laws
- Wage and hour violations
- Wrongful termination and unpaid wages
- Violations of state medical marijuana laws
