OVERVIEW

With a lifelong passion for medicine and a background in health administration and policy, Anna focuses her practice on regulatory compliance in the healthcare industry.

Anna advises major hospital systems and physician groups on healthcare operations, general regulatory compliance matters, and issues specific to academic medicine. She especially enjoys working with large university health systems with their exciting integration of education and healthcare. In addition, Anna represents hospitals in medical staff matters and disputes concerning physicians and providers, and she also provides counsel on various pharmacy related matters.

During her undergraduate years, she majored in health administration and policy and public health, developing an interest in the business and legal side of healthcare operations. Anna still sees healthcare from a public health perspective, and she cares deeply about improving systems for both patients and providers.

Known as a highly reliable professional who gets it right the first time, Anna offers clients a creative, strategic perspective in straightforward language. She serves as a true client partner, building lasting collaborative relationships.
