OVERVIEW

Taylor counsels clients on healthcare regulatory compliance.

Taylor's decision to attend law school stemmed from a love for problem-solving and a desire to engage in lifelong learning. Her interest in healthcare regulatory work is driven by the dynamic nature of the field and its universal importance. Taylor enjoys staying up to date on the latest innovations so that she can best serve clients, and she finds it deeply rewarding to help healthcare providers and organizations ensure they can respond effectively to industry needs.

During law school, Taylor participated in the Community Enterprise Clinic, where she counseled small business owners on various legal matters. This experience underscored the importance of clear communication and building strong relationships with clients. Taylor also interned with the Boston Public Health Commission, gaining valuable insights into the governmental aspects of healthcare regulation. At the Commission, she was exposed to the thought process behind drafting healthcare regulations, the process of implementing such regulations, and the challenges that arise from these actions.

Taylor is known for her attention to detail and creative problem-solving abilities. A dedicated, dependable professional, she takes the time to understand and respond to clients' needs.
