OVERVIEW

A real estate attorney with a corporate background, Steve oversees real property projects with a businessperson's eye.

Steve helps clients navigate commercial real estate projects with a direct, business-minded approach. Handling transactions that include purchases, sales, leases, sale-leasebacks, and portfolio deals valued into the hundreds of millions, Steve works with developers, real estate companies, and major corporations across the country. Many of these projects involve multifamily housing, hotels, retail, and restaurants, as well as complex financing and commercial lending arrangements. Steve's practice reaches nationwide, often overseeing entire property portfolios for companies with a broad geographic footprint.

With a background that blends corporate and real estate experience, Steve brings a unique perspective to every project. Earlier in his career, he handled a range of corporate transactions and held management roles in Fortune 300 companies, giving him a solid understanding of capital markets, equity, and asset-based lending. His corporate experiences shape his approach to real estate: Steve knows that companies need certainty, speed to market, and cost control, and he sees the law as a customer service business where client needs come first.

Building and development have always been at the center of Steve's work, starting with a landscaping business he launched in seventh grade and continuing through years of hands-on experience in construction and redevelopment. A traditional "dirt lawyer" who simply loves closing real estate deals, he thrives on helping clients bring new projects to life or reimagine existing properties.
