OVERVIEW

With a passion for community development, Katie represents investors and lenders in state and federal tax credit transactions.

Katie primarily focuses her practice on New Market Tax Credits (NMTC), assisting with projects that serve low-income communities and supporting developments that make a real difference in neighborhoods across the country. She has worked on a wide range of transactions from coast to coast, each with clear community benefit. In addition to her work with NMTC, Katie also handles occasional projects that qualify for Low-Income Housing Tax Credits (LIHTC) and historic tax credits. She most often represents investors, community development entities, and lenders—sophisticated clients who are deeply experienced in tax credit developments and expect smooth, efficient transactions.

After beginning her legal career in real estate transactions, Katie quickly became involved in tax credit work. The variety of projects and their positive effects on communities drew her in, and she has continued to focus on this area ever since.

Katie brings more than a decade of experience to each transaction and has handled tax credit matters throughout her career. Clients value her warm and approachable style, which helps make complex deals feel manageable and straightforward. Known as flexible and creative, she has a knack for adapting to unexpected challenges and keeping deals on track. Katie's practical approach and steady presence help clients navigate each step of the process, no matter how complicated a project may be.
